WORKING WITH LORD TAYLOR

From the left: authors Dr. Martyn Frampton, Inigo Gurruchaga and Dr. John Bew, with WLF intern Sam Baldwin

The book "Talking to Terrorists" explores the problems surrounding the issue of negotiating with extremists; and whether we can learn from the experiences of Northern Ireland. What emerged from the debate was the importance of keeping open lines of communication and seeking to agree first the less controversial issues.

TRAINING AND DEVELOPMENT

Maggie Holleran trained in Personnel Management, and has 11 years of experience running an inner city NHS GP practice. She has been teaching Milenia and Sam about the need for "wholeness and balance", with an aim at looking at their intellectual and emotional skills. In their next session they will be presenting a speech about their future vision as leaders.

IN THE SPOTLIGHT

We like to keep in touch with past interns. This month we are featuring Liz Hodges!

Liz is working part-time as executive assistant for Social Entrepreneur Lord Mawson, founder of the Bromley by Bow centre and the Community Action Network. Liz is also commencing a PhD in War Literature and continuing her studies in harp performance and teaching. What an interesting balance!

LORD TAYLOR OF WARWICK

Lord Taylor was the master of ceremonies at the Aspire conference on 16th June. Aspire is an award winning global consulting, coaching and leadership development company. Dr Samantha Collins, the founder of Aspire, said that "Lord Taylor was truly inspiring and a vital part of the huge success of the evening". In the photo Lord Taylor is with entrepreneur Rachel Elnaugh, the first female dragon on BBC Two TV series Dragons' Den.
